

Information for the parent or guardian

Celia's free-of-charge talking book service includes thousands of books

Celia's talking books can be used by anyone who finds reading ordinary books difficult, due to, for instance, dyslexia, learning difficulties, difficulties in concentrating, mental disability, visual impairment or other disability, which makes it difficult to handle or read ordinary books.

Celia's talking book service is completely free of charge. The service offers thousands of children's and youth books and school textbooks, including popular books from Finland, such as Ella and Pate and Risto Rappääjä, foreign favourites, fairy tales, fantasy and animal books.

Where and how can I get Celia's talking books?

Celia's talking books are borrowed and listened to on a tablet or mobile phone using the Pratsam Reader application. The books can also be borrowed and listened to in the Celianet online service. When joining the Celia talking book service, your child receives a user ID and password for both options.

Custodians may also borrow books for the child's device via Celianet.

Instructions for borrowing and listening to books are available in Celianet (in Finnish): www.celianet.fi/ohjeet

Special education teacher registers your child in the Celia's book service

Your consent as guardian is required in order for a teacher to register your child in the Celia talking book service. You can use this form to give your consent. You can also give consent for instance orally in connection with a conversation with the special education teacher.

Your child can also join Celia's talking book service in the library with a guardian.

Over 15-year-olds can join the service independently in the library.

The use of Celia book service can be terminated by notifying the school, library or Celia.
